On Mexican Soil.

I have written you before of Northern Mexico from the Rio Grande to the city my former descriptions, although I might correct a few statements that I made at the time, if I could remember what they were, and how badly they were exaggerated. But I must confess that I felt quite at home on Mexican soil and the exhortations of the beggars and fruit vendars caused me to feel quite content. However our team reached the city only S hours behind time, and by so doing gave me the opportunity of seeing a part paratively, dropping out of Puebla it descends gently about 3,000 feet. Cut rises more abruptly near Oaxaca, usual ly following a water course.

At a point about midway, two rivers meet. At this junction, the lowest point on the read the river created by the conhe two tributaries. Quite an unusual feature in railroad construction, as well as the direction of the flow of the two rivers which flow directly toward each in

On the train I encountered a man forced upon me.

Then in the capacity of Courier I secured transportation for ourselves to the discover that my helpless friend had but 9 cents in current coin. Its had been supplied, in exchange for good Ameri can money with private bank bills of the state of Chihushua, and for which he could not get a cent in the highly enlightened state of Oaxaca.

The city of Oaxaca is celebrated for its mild and equable climate. It is surrounded by mountains or rather sets in a pass in the mountains at an elevation of about five thousand feet. South of town the country is a rolling plain broken occasionally by a sharp peak caused probably by volcanic eruptions.

There are ruins of many ancient vil lages in the vicinity, some of which are unusually interesting. Especially Mitla with its mosaics and many relies of Aztec arts and industries.

Ocotlan, the hendquarters for mining men of nearby districts, is 25 miles from Oaxaca, by stage, farther by horse. The inhabitants thereof are Indians, enjoying a very ancient mode of living, are cunning, dishonest, dirty, fanatical and strangly averse to any violent exercise, excepting bull fighting, but that only involves a few. They are hostile to the above, but they are rare. The aver- west of Richville, on the Fillmore road, dustrial progress. age wage is about 37c per day, which is at least twice their value.

There are also some real mining men in the locality but are seidom seen at Ocotian. They are rustling around in the hills in the hot sun, living on tortillas and beans, working like slaves try-ing to get a days work out of the Inand pistols, but an old blue flannel shirt overalls and hobnailed shoes. The first essential to that beauty of omplexion which we all envy in others and seldom make an honest effort to secure for ourselves is a healthy skin. The camel's har face brush is much to be commended. T seep the face healthy it must first be kep. clean, and a vigorous rubbing with the brush is much more effective for this than simply washing the face with a cloth or sponge. Be sides, it increases the circulation and invigorates the skin. The face should be first thoroughly scrubbed with soap be had, take a teaspoon of thick sweet ream. Rub in thoroughly, rinse the face with warm water and dry completely. The skin will then be delightfully soft and fresh. The daily bath is, of course, the foundation of a good complexion. Without it no woman can retain her freehness very long. Exercise s another essential. The languid young woman who starts in life with a pillow glued to her back may gain a certain
